Daydreaming is second nature to me, and my inner world is filled with castles, dragons, elves and magic. Nothing comes out of nothing; these fantasies are shaped by books, games, mass media, and the places and people I have encountered. Friends and family know I have a fixation with castles and interesting architecture, and they would gift me dioramas and miniatures from time to time. Wanderlust afflicts different people differently; some journeys are not necessarily made with our feet, but with our minds.
